MASTERLY ADDRESS HUGH HENRY BROWN ON ARMISTICE DAY

By Hugh Henry Brown.

Armistice day has come to stay. What will it be like? How shall we celebrate it?

A commander of one of the Legion posts in Ohio said a few days ago: "It is up to us to make the American people want to celebrate Armistice day." How, then?

So far as the year 1921 is concerned, the day is made memorable by the burial in Arlington of an unknown American soldier with the whole nation standing at attention.

Midst the thunder of the drums and the salutation of the guns the hearts of the American people bow today in gratitude to that one grave; for through him and his comrades humanity was released from a hideous terror.

It is not a silent tomb. It is a tongue and vocative with a message that rings today in the ears of the nation. The message that I seem to hear from that eloquent tomb in Arlington is a plea that we dedicate Armistice day to keeping alive the spirit of 1918—the spirit that stirred him and his fellow American soldiers overseas as they fought side by side with men of other nations in a common cause—the spirit of co-operation and good will between associated nations. It was one of the most precious assets humanity ever possessed.

During the past three years much of that old spirit has relaxed. In some places it has disappeared. It has been banished by the disappointments, snarls and despairs of peace. Three years of turmoil have bedeviled the minds of most of us and made November 11, 1918, seem a decade away. If we have forgotten the spirit of 1918, we must recall it. Possibly we may be able to erect a national holiday to perpetuate it.

Armistice day is too big to keep to ourselves. The way is open to us to make it a world-wide day; a day of national usefulness; a day when we turn our thoughts away from ourselves and toward all mankind; a day dedicated to sentiments of international neighborliness.

We may not be ready for mandates, nor for any adventure in foreign statecraft as an active participant. But we are ready to declare to the world, and we have so declared, our readiness to espouse the great principle of world-wide arbitration and our readiness to join in devising practical ways and means to establish a courthouse for all nations, and also a universal sheriff, if need be. Otherwise, men of far vision see no hope. In another generation there will be another American Legion, the sons of the American Legion, and another A. E. F.

We took a long step to establish an international judiciary when we asked the nations to come here and discuss limitation of armament. How eagerly Europe answered! How eagerly the plain people rose to it! What a tragedy if it should prove fruitless! What a mockery if statesmen prove impotent to satisfy a universal craving of mankind!

Out of the ruck of war let us gain something more than mere victory. Out of the ruck of war let us learn tolerance—tolerance of other nations and other peoples, and of their manners and customs.

Our knowledge and appreciation of our neighbors, and a day devoted to acknowledgement of their merits, and a national expression of appreciation and good will cannot retard the coming of a better way of life in international relations.

But some will say, "Why direct our thoughts and energies to foreign lands when there are millions of our own population whose thoughts are not yet sufficiently directed to our own country? There are many answers. One answer is that a friendly interest toward alien lands may quicken arouse reciprocal friendly interest toward America by aliens within our borders.

Again, it may be said that this is a fantastic dream. It is not. It is the most practical and as essential as the reconciliation of the north and the south. It is a basic principle of statecraft, which our whole people can embrace and put into practical operation.

America has won the industrial leadership of the world. America has won the financial leadership of the world. Who will deny America's fitness to win the moral leadership of the world? What other nation could with so much propriety and logic take the initiative in establishing a universal day dedicated to the welfare of all nations? The blood of all flows in us. We are half-brother to the world. All currents meet and mingle in our race. Ours is the land where old ideas flicker out—the land where hate expires—the land of the great reconciliation.

We can do this thing, not only because the world looks to us for moral leadership, but also because, unlike the countries of Europe, we are not cursed with the feuds of old frontiers; we have inherited no irredentas; our fathers have bequeathed us no vendettas; we are legates to no heritage of hate. No dead hand points our pathway nor palsies our free action. Our eyes are on the future; not on the past. Our course is dictated by principles and not by traditions. For a thousand years Europe has fought out the consequences of the treaty made in 1648 at Verdun. Europe is stifled with history. Here in our land the highway of living men is not befouled with dead things of the past. It would seem like a blast of fresh sweet air down the highways and back alleys of Europe if, once each year, with American Legion with one hundred million Americans behind them in chorus, would bid Europe forget the rotten old ledgers of past centuries and open their accounts on clean sheets and do business like twentieth century men.

Here is leadership for the Legion: To perpetuate the spirit of 1918; to keep it alive and never let us forget; to make it work again in a practical way; to make it fulfill itself by blazing the trail and make clear the way up which all the nations of the earth sooner or later must come to that place where the hopes of mankind are focused—where nations must unite in some working plan

LITTLE NICETIES OF DRESS THAT BESPEAK REFINEMENT

WOMEN are sometimes accused of thinking more about adornment than about clothing—it is no very important matter whether they do or not. There is never a time when they will not run after the small niceties of dress. They have always loved finery; it is an instinct with them, and a charm. Let us hope that none of them will outgrow or outlive it.

The shops are showing many interesting dress accessories, and new embellishments. There is a revival of necklaces and long earrings; metal or other materials in girdles for frocks and coats, to replace those made of fabrics, are featured. Neckwear shows a few new departures in Puritan and other collars of fine embroidery, in scarves and in vestees or gilets. The favorite neckwear is still the vestee and collar combination as shown in the picture, varied by the introduction of colored organdie in place of white and occasional models in chiffon. But nothing will ever eclipse lace and net—with fine embroideries in these dainty neckpieces.

Bags of heavy silk, crocheted into shape and adorned with steel beads are the ambition of smart women. They are rivaled by handsome ribbon bags with metal or celluloid mountings that are somewhat less expensive but far from inexpensive. But these are among the pretty things that women can make for themselves at a saving. Along with other things Spanish are combs and fans. There is a decided revival in both and this winter may see many treasures in combs, earrings and fans reclaimed from their hiding places.

Which is Larger the Sun or a Cent?

ONE CENT

"Why—the sun of course" you will say. But remember—you can hold the cent so close to your eye that you lose sight of the sun. Some baking powders can be bought for a few pennies less than Calumet—but don't hold these cents too close to your eyes—you will not be able to see the quality—the purity—the dependability of

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

In other words, don't be deceived by a few pennies—the cheapest baking powder in price is often the most expensive.

When you buy Calumet you know that it will produce pure, sweet, and wholesome bakings. You know that you use less because it contains more than the ordinary leavening strength.

Buy it—try it—be convinced.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 ounces. Some baking powders come in 12 ounce instead of 16 ounce cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.
